PRESIDENT ARTHUR GRISWOLD CRANE
A Distinguished Gentleman . . . Scholar . . . Administrator
Builder . . . Molder of Lives

Four years before Wyoming Territory became a state, on September 27, 1886, the first building on the campus was started when the corner stone of University Hall was laid. Today, fifty-four years later, University Hall, better known as "Old Main," is having its face washed for the state's fiftieth birthday party. The building which houses the President's suite, the offices of the Dean of Men and the Dean of Women, and most of the administrative units of the University is being entirely revamped to take its place alongside its more recently constructed campus brethren.

In contrast to "Old Main," which is well past the half-century mark, is the Wyoming Student Union building, "our home away from home." One year old as of March 31, 1940, the Union has enjoyed the eminent title of undisputed Campus Center. From Manager Burton DeLoney we receive the following vital statistics: The Union played host to nearly half a million in its first year. The swank fountain room catered to 1,200 daily, and committee meetings, dances and dinners accounted for another 21,594 guests. So leaving our mathematics the cry is, "Happy birthday, dear Union, Happy birthday to you.'

Picturesque Merica Hall, women's dormitory, overlooks the treestudded south side of the campus.

As the day's shadows lengthen, the long, white walls of Hoyt Hall pick up the last rays of sunlight and make the building the last to leave the visual landscape as en-

Like some castle of old the Men's Hall stands outlined against the black of night majestically protesting the northeastern approach to the campus, 'though there be nothing save tumbleweed beyond. Up to date in every respect the Men's Hall is one of the latest additions to the campus.

gulfing darkness approaches. To date the largest dormitory on the campus, Hoyt Hall has accommodations for over 150 girls.

By no means the most popular of campus buildings but at any rate one of the busiest is the Library. This many-windowed rectangular building houses the Law school among other cut-and-dried works. 'The "Lib," as it is generally known to campus sophisticates, is at capacity output three times a year during "dead week."

Agricultural Hall plays host to the potential backbones of the nation. The building contains all the departments of the College of Agriculture except Home Economics. Atop we have the mechanics of the official University weatherman.

The Normal Building harbors the elementary and secondary training schools, classrooms of the College of Education, and is the constant scene of teachers-to-be strutting their stuff.

Not entirely unlike "Old Main" is Science Hall, one of the earlier buildings on the campus. This building is headquarters for Wyoming's renowned department of Geology and houses the University Museum.

One of the most impressive of campus buildings is Engineering Hall whose majestic columnar center rises high above the three-story wings. The divisions of mechanical, electrical, and civil engineering; the departments of physics, botany, and mathematics; and the engineering shops are all located here.

The Liberal Arts building is modern from every engineering viewpoint yet its external architecture remains that of an earlier and perhaps more romantic day. By day the scene of classes in Liberal Arts;

Home of the campus muscle men is the Gymnasium, scene of indoor athletic events. The building contains the famous half-acre gym, swimming pool, armory, small gyms and instruction rooms. When the hard-riding Cowboys aren't out for gore, the gym is often the scene of dances and carnivals.

by night the host to eminent speakers and famed personalities of Broadway and Hollywood-that is the double life of the L. A. building and University Auditorium.

Miss E. Luella Galliver, M.A., Dean of Women, directs the interests of the women students. She is on the administrative staff and a member of the faculty committee on student credit, student employment, and student social life.

Major Beverly C. Daly, U. S. A., retired, is the Dean of Men. The welfare of all men students is his particular interest, and he is a member of the committees concerned with their social life and conduct.

Miss Ida J. Moen, although not technically on the administrative staff of the University, as secretary to President Crane, attends to many of the routine administrative problems.

Dean Carl F. Arnold, LL.B., J.S.D., has, since 1933, been head of the Law School. In the twenty years of its existence on the U. W. campus, the Law School has made extremely gratifying progress. It has received an "A" classification by the American Bar Association, the highest classification given by that body and shared only by the strongest schools in the country.

Dean Ralph D. Goodrich, C.E., has, since 1928, been head of the College of Engineering at the University of Wyoming. Full four-year curricula are offered by the Engineering Department leading to a B.S. degree in either Civil, Electrical, Mechanical or General Engineering.

The function of the College of Engineering is to train the future leaders in industrial development.

Dean John A. Hill, B.S., since 1913 has been head of the ever-growing College of Agriculture. Graduates of this college have been taking a more and more active and important part in agriculture and homemaking throughout the entire country.

The livestock judging teams have been bringing high honors and wide recognition to the University for the past several years.

Dean Pleasant T. Miller, M.A., Dean of the College of Liberal Arts since 1918. The college has three divisions, Letters and Sciences, Division of Commerce and Division of Music.

Dfan Oscar C. Schwiering, Ph.D., is the newest of the deans having taken office this year following the death of Dean Maxwell, for many years dean of the College of Education.

It is possible for students in the College of Education to come in direct contact with classroom procedure as the training schools provide a laboratory for the demonstration of education principles. The college has for its province the training of teachers for all types of service in the schools of the state.

The student chapter of the American Society of Civil Engineers was founded on the University of Wyoming campus in January of 1925. At the present time there are eighty student members of the local chapter. The chapter is sponsored by the American Society of Civil Engineers, which is a national civil engineering society of which the membership is made up of recognized civil engineers throughout the United States and other countries.

The $W_{\text {yoming }}$ Student Chapter sponsors all activities in the civil engineering division and aids the General Engineering Society in promoting the Engineer's Ball, the Engineers' Open House and engineering conventions.

Meetings are held every two weeks. The programs consist of talks by practicing engineers in the state of Wyoming, and student papers, and motion pictures of a civil engineering nature.

This organization of upperclasswomen has as its purpose the important job of Freshman orientation. Freshmen girls, upon their arrival at college, are assigned to a "Sister" whose duty it is to call on them, answer any questions they might have, and acquaint them with college life in general.

Interested upperclasswomen submit applications each spring and the Big Sisters select from these as their successors those women who exhibit ability to help others.

FOREWORD

ODAY the games, players, and coaches of the 1939-40 season are vivid realizations. Lou Dunnigan's sensational eighty-yard run against New Mexico early in the football season; the selection of Ken Sturman for All-Conference first team; Willie Rothman's fine brand of basketball; and among a host of other incidents, Coach Hunt's famed hidden ball play, are all a constant part of our student activity.

But as the years go by few of us will recall the success or failure of today's Cowboy teams. The games so important to us in the present will be lost in the haze of time as other games come up to take their place. The stars of today will fade into oblivion and in reflection only a smattering of activity in the realm of sports will come back to us.

Still it is not the purpose of this section to merely recapitulate the results of this sporting season. Names and scores that are of vital interest today will be a meaningless muddle of words and figures in all too short a time. All that this section purports to do is to present the students with a glimpse into the activities of a passing parade.

Along the latest trend in photography and editing our pictures are for the most part candid and away from the stereotyped idea of posed portraits. If this type of presentation lacks conventionality and does not in all places acknowledge the most deserving of space in accordance with their prowess, we can only offer as a justification the fact that we present an instantaneous reflection of our times. Nothing more.

WYO ATHLETIC BRAIN TRUST

We have it from usually authoritative sources that this coaching business is a queer game. They say that within a fortnight these faithful counselors of sport can rise to the pinnacle of popularity and acclaim or fall to the pit of ridicule and dislike. They can become the geniuses of the day or the laughingstocks of a nation; all-in-all, their job is definitely on the risky side and each game that they witness from the bench makes Dante's Inferno a veritable paradise.

Despite a few visible eccentricities and guirks within the athletic mind, the coaching staff at $W$ yoming does not differ in any respect from those that teach the stuff the length and breadth of this sports-loving nation.

In short, when the team comes through with a victory the coach is tops; when it falls by the way for any one of a number of reasons the coach's fair name is defamed and subjected to a sharp criticism that is only to be found in a collegiate crowd that has a developed intellect coupled with an extensive vocabulary for calling down.

With this in mind we present the Cowboy mentors-Wyoming's athletic brain trust.

Head Football Coach and Director of Intercollegiate Athletics Joel Hunt baffles Blocking-Back Lloyd White with the renowned hidden ball play. Opposition take note.

Line Coach Calhoun, who doesn't believe in whistling while you work, is a stickler for precision on the gridiron. When Cal commands, the boys jump, and they're big boys themselves.

Head Basketball Coach Ev Shelton takes time out from a between periods lecture to attend to star Willie Rothman's injured visage.

Aside from being head wrestling and track coach, Everett Lantz acts as assistant football coach. A tough assignment for any man.

Dean O'Conner promises big doings on the baseball diamond for $19+1$.

Historian Doc Larson allows the worries of a tennis team to interfere with teaching co-eds the meaning of "manifest destiny.'

Student-Coach Bill Hatfield tries hard to make champions out of his little fishes of the swimming squad. Maybe next year, Bill.

When not attending to the duties of the physical education department, the following distinguished quintet grooms athletes for the red-letter day when they'll be hardriding Cowboys out for gore.

In today's advanced state when everything, including collegiate athletics, has been big business it is rare indeed to find the athlete who hasn't been scouted for years and induced one way or another to come to college. But every once in a while we run across a lad who steps out of a gym class onto the playing field and shows the other boys up. In most cases the credit belongs to the physical education department and the individual's prowess, of course.

Here they are, hard at work!

R. L. (Red) Markley is a new face on the campus this year. As acting director of physical education, Markley succeeds John Corbett. We find him in a pensive mood.

When it comes to keeping the official records and making two and two equal four, F . Elton Davis, manager of intercollegiate athletics, is our man.

A  HIS  DREAM

Coach Joel Hunt has innovated a system of football training hitherto untried at Wyoming, namely that of both winter and spring practice. The winter, or indoor training, began in the middle of the winter quarter and ended on March 3. The primary purpose of this extensive training period was to mould last year's unsuccessful team into a fighting body that has a complete understanding of Coach Hunt's plays coupled with the intelligence to make the best use of them.

This year's graduation of Dorrington, Sturman, White, and Shrum leaves gaping holes in the line-up that must be filled by equally capable stars if the team is to win games. Although these men aren't as yet discovered, Coach Hunt believes that the winter football practice has done much to smooth out the rough spots and prepare the team for the 1940 session.

We'll just have to wait for Wyoming's windy pigskin days to roll around once more and see if we can better last year's standing at the bottom of the Big Seven heap.

Coach Hunt smokes, curses, and worries during a sixty-minute nightmare every Saturday during the gridiron season.

B A S K E T B A L L

The Cowboy quintet, although not a contender for the conference championship this year, has proved to the fans, their coach, and to themselves that they have a fine spirit, a great amout of punch, and definite possibilities for the next two or three years.

Although the Cowboys only marked up three wins out of twelve tries, they have shown that they can play the brand of ball conference championship calls for.

Undoubtedly one of the major factors in the development of this year's cage squad is the coaching of Everett Shelton who brought the Denver Safeways up to a national championship before he came to Wyoming. Handicapped by an inexperienced squad, Coach Shelton managed to whip up a sophomore studded group that promises plenty of trouble to the conference leaders when the Cowboys take to the half-acre next season.

Along with thousands of other sports enthusiasts from the steep hills of Maine to the wide-open slopes of Idaho, Wyoming too has gone ski-crazy.

Under the capable direction of Michael Sedar, University skiing instructor; A. G. Delmarsh, Jr., faculty member; and Gabor de Morvey, skiing instructor at the Snowy Range Winter Sports Club, a ski club was formed at the University.

Out on the open slopes "Ski Heil" has taken the place of the familiar "Powder River, Let 'er Buck."

A. G. Delmarsh, Jr., faculty sponsor of the Ski Club, is quite proficient at the art himself.

BOY

THEY SEE WYOMING BEAT DENVER, 36-28
This business of a guy and a gal "doing the town" is old stuff. Adam and Eve ate apples together; Romeo and Juliet saw a good deal of each other even though their folks tried to queer the match; and it's not exactly clear what Anthony and Cleopatra had in common. So, less the historians of future days comment upon our generation as being the exception to the rule, let's bring forth our noble pair. We dedicate all that follows to the archeologists of a day to come. Reading from left to right this is the way it was done in good old 1940 A. D.:

Our hero is calling his gal on a device known as a "phone." IIe does not exemphe is still content with of times since he ire and defies the uew electic fuzz-re mug and movers.

Having overcome the difficulties of transportation (in her car) and purchased tickets of admission (on his father's money). our couple are on their the thrills and spills of a basketball game.

After over a half hour of this ordeal, he doesn't know what emotion to register since the object of the game isn't exactly clear. Our hero is a law student and is concentrating on a tort or two.

The young lady on this end of the wire accepting a date and cousiders herself nighty lucky since it is just about the leventh hour and she was going to rewre. (It is obvious that this picture was posed since no woman looks like that before tetiring.)

It is near the end and this is an example of the stuff they see It's quite some time since he tonk this picture and we ve forBut hy this time our hero and heroine are catching on and.

As the final gun goes off our friends are happy about the whole thing. Well, they're excited anyway. She tells him about the show downtown and all the places to dance, but on hero is firm and they end up Coking in the Union. He doesn't mind parting with his money but is sentimental about Washington's picture on the green stuff. After a time of silly conversation he will take her home. And that is the way Tony and Cleo got together in 1940 A. D.

It's Elmer Shaw crossing the bar.

Sparked by a strong medley relay team, the University track team, coached by Everett Lantz, promises to be a much stronger outfit than in previous seasons.

Tom Bryant, Ed Witzenburger, Virgil Thorpe and Tom Simon make up the medley relay team which is expected to garner a large share of conference honors.

In the weight division the loss of Vic Perkovitch will be felt keenly. "Perk," who handled the discus and javelin last year, has been ordered out of competition because of ill health.

When Coach Lantz took over track this season he was greeted with a turnout of forty men. According to all signs, this points toward a successful year for Cowboy cinder men.

With the return of all but one of last year's lettermen, Wyoming's "Nine Old Men" loom as a strong contender for the conference championship in our third year of Big Seven competition. At early spring workouts Coach Dean O'Connor felt confident of a good showing for 1940.

Placing second in the race for the 1939 flag, the club this year will feel the loss of Billy Corrigan who garnered all-conference honors for his work at shortstop last season.

The infield will find Max Bradbard, veteran catcher, "taking it up" behind the plate. George Dorrington will cover the first sack, Chuck Bentson, the keystone, and Williard Barker will hold down the hot corner. It seems to be a toss-up between Lou Dunnigan and Robert Potts for shortstop.

Johnny Winterholler, all-conference outfielder and Big Seven batting champ, will head the list of lettermen back in the grassy section which includes Rich Mullens, Leonard Koski, and Jim Logas.

In addition to two sophomores who show promise in mound work, the pitching staff will he strengthened by the return of Keith Angwin and Johnny Higgins. Higgins didn't lose a single conference game in 1939 and was awarded all-conference selection for his work.

It looks as though Wyoming's 1939-40 salvation in the sports world rests with O'Conner's boys.

The Wyoming grapplers placed second in the conference, losing only one dual meet to Colorado Aggies. Merl Smith, 121-pound matman, won his second consecutive Big Seven conference wrestling championship to add to the Puncher's glory.

Coach Ev Lantz has kept a large squad working double time this season and is optimistic about grabbing the conference championship next year. A motley crew if ever there was one.

It's not all Saturday afternoon heroism for the pigskin greats. Behind every kick, every tackle, every block, and, yes, every fumble, there are long afternoons of hard practice. The brand of football that plays to an empty stadium and knows no reward. There is no victory to be had and the only desserts are a liniment rub-down and a cool shower.

We just stopped by and here's an example of the stuff that the average person misses:

Football equipment is a big item in any man's budget and here we see faithful George checking stock while the man with the hat searches for the size in a jersey.

After a good deal of towel slapping and practical jokjoking, the boys don their uniforms and .

The command is "on the double" as they head out onto the field.

Blocking Back Lloyd White takes a calling down by the coach out on some innocent freshman, and they tell us that this is the way it should be done.

Light and Fleety Lou Dunnigan practices changing pace and shifting weight-the trick of getting away from the other boy.

Alone, Thorpe comes charging for the line

The place-kick has been the pay-off all too often so Coach Hunt keeps the boys at it.

Many a game has been won on good punting and Coach Hunt, an expert in the art himself, keeps George Dorrington at it hour on end.

Landman thinks that practice is good fun and he smiles as he comes for a hole in the line. The hole closed up and so did Landman smile and all.

Space hasn't afforded a glance at the scrimmages that are the dirty work in practice. Nor do we see the exercises, the line-up for a chance at the tackling dummy. But then there's the mental angle. It's one thing to concentrate on how to run, shift weight, tackle, and pass simultaneously ; but to remember a host of plays that approach calculus and relativity in the bargain . . we'll watch it from the stands.

ost of the seniors pictured in this section will soon be going through the scene pictured above, that of commencement and graduation. Some of the hardy souls, however, will be back for another year, some by request and some by choice. To them we say "Hello again, see you next year." To those who are leaving may we extend our best wishes for a successful future and an invitation to come and see us often.

Basketball stars, Gowdy and Bentson, pose graciously for the cameraman.

From the expression on his face, we'd say Cheerleader Homer Grooman is rather disgusted. We can't tell whether or not Marijane Waitley shares the same opinion.

This year's Student Senate should go down in history as a model of progress and industry. Under the skillful guidance of Ernest Wilkerson, the Senate this year launched such activities as this Yearbook and the Varsity Show and other important routine business.

THE BRANDING IRON

For three years Chuck served on the B. I. in various capacities; and during this, his senior vear, he guided the policy of the paper and directed the efforts of the staff as editor. His attitude has been one of fair representation of student opinion and accurate news reporting (and a fast game of ping-pong).

The most successful business manager of recent years has been Teno Roncalio. A sophomore, he has rapidly become one of the best known men on the campus as he continually drives about in his black Chrysler in search of ads, ads and more ads.

By Thornton Wilder

Directed by Professor Ralph E. Conwell

The "Jesters," a group of University professors and townspeople, made one of the most successful of the year's dramatic productions with Our Town, the no-scenery Broadway play. It was presented in the University Auditorium. University Student Dorothy Roper played the feminine lead, and many other students were asked to participate in a great number of the scenes.

Emily Webb (Dorothy Roper) and George Gibbs (C. M. Stebner) fall in love New-England-small-town-style, in a soda fountain.

Emily and George are married-music supplied by Wilder's cynicism. The tragedy does not culminate with Emily's death, but continues until she returns from the cemetery to visit her family on her twelfth birthday.

By Elizabeth McFadden
Directed by Dr. Louis A. Mallory

Ann Darrow, played by Mary June Reed, receives attentions from Dr. Sully (George Wienbarg, standing) and Rip Van Bret (Tom Procter, kneeling) as Rip's sisters, Caroline (Louise Johnson) and Victoria (Betty Peterson) watch with alarm and chagrin, respectively.

Theatre tradition is upset when the leading man and woman get married in the first act.

After almost succeeding in murdering Ann, Victoria makes an attempt on her sister's life. She is again "thwarted," and the play ends when she goes insane.

Grease paints, lining-colors, rouges - everything that is to be used for dressed-rehearsal is prepared. Bob Rebbe, working on make-up, prepares the kit and the room for action. Strong stage lights take away all natural color and outlines of eyes and wrinkles, causing the need for artificial coloring.

Grease paint changes the color of the character's complexion to more easily reflect the bright spot and flood lights.

The final step. Gail Bullock lines eyes and eyebrows, adds wrinkles, and then powders to give the natural effect.

Make-up rooms are located below and on both sides of the stage. The room shown here is the large Theta Alpha Phi (National Dramatics Honorary) room, below and north of the stage.

SCENES

Much of the play isn't seen by the audience. Stage-workers, property girls, electricians, and make-up men contribute to the finished production.

In the roof of the massive auditorium ( 1,996 seats), over sixty feet in a diagonal upward line from center-stage is the spotlight beam, invisible to the audience. Left, is a stage "set" seen through the wire grid which protects the spot-placer from falling into the auditorium.

Strike means take down the set. The ropes which hold the outer corners of the "flats" together are jerked loose with a whipping motion, and the set is quickly assembled, or disassembled, as the case may be. The stagehands are seen at work on the set for DOUBLE-DOOR.

The University of Wyoming's stage is conceded to be the best equipped in the region. In the picture, right, John Redman, stage manager, is listening for the clue to signal members of the stage crew to lift one of the back "drops." 'The ropes controlling the curtains and "drops" extend up fiftytwo feet to the grid, or iron network supporting them.

Below and right, a stage spot-light is being set to take out an unnecessary shadow in a room scene.

The Interfraternity Council is composed of two members from each Greek social fraternity on the campus and a faculty president elected by the council members. Prof. R. M. Bourne is president and Major Daly, as dean of men, is an ex-officio member.

The primary purpose of the council is to bring about a closer contact between the Greek organizations and this group formulates the important rules governing rushing as well as other fraternity interests. They also sponsor the Interfraternity ball during spring quarter.

Miss Twila Smith

Sophomore, Kappa Kappa Gamma, was Carroll's choice for third place. She is Wyoming's Governor Nels H. Smith's niece, and she hails from Grand Forks, South Dakota.

Earl Carroll, of "Vanities" fame, selected this year's beauty winners in the annual Branding Iron contest. We think you'll agree that he really has an eye and we herewith present his selections.

Miss Charlotte Spurlock

Pi Beta Phi, was named second in this year's contest. Charlotte, a junior, is very prominent in campus circles, both social and scholastic, and has recently been putting in four hours a day as cashier in the Union fountain. Her home is in Douglas.

MISS SALLY ROUSE
was chosen as the most beautiful girl on the Wyoming campus, and what better proof can there be than this picture? Sally, a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma, is a sophomore and spends her summers in Cheyenne. Lucky Cheyenne!

MISS PATRICIA SULLIVAN
Popularity
The most popular girl on the U. W. campus for three of past four years is the enviable record compiled by Pat. She is extremely active in campus social circles and is a member of Mortar Board. Pat is a senior, a member of Pi Beta Phi, and lives in Laramie.
